

Andrew Phelps

Journalist and hacker. Passionate about great storytelling.

Staff Writer, Nieman Journalism Lab (niemanlab.org)

Nieman Foundation for Journalism, Harvard University, Cambridge, Mass. (March 2011–Present)

Media reporter for the leading authority on news innovation, specializing in public broadcasting, disruptive technology, social media and new business models. Early adopter. Citizen of Twitter. Spotter and creator of trends. Co-manager of @NiemanLab, named by TIME one of the 140 best Twitter feeds. Inventor of Fuego, a Web app that continuously mines Twitter for the most interesting links in journalism and tech.

Project Manager, Web Relaunch

WBUR, Boston (March 2009–July 2009)

Led the digital-first transition for a leading public radio newsroom. Chief architect of wbur.org, the first website to integrate NPR's API and bust the "brochure model" of station sites; managed a team of five and launched in five months. Developed standards, best practices for Web publishing. Trained and supported all reporters and producers.

Edward R. Murrow Award, "Web Site (Radio: Large Market)," Radio Television Digital News Association, April 2011

First Place, "Website," The Associated Press of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, April 2011

First Place, "Website," The Associated Press of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, April 2010

Reporter, Senior Producer, wbur.org

WBUR (September 2008–March 2011)

Founding host of Hubbub, a daily news blog about "what's happening now in Boston." Served as the station's social media man and the "face" of wbur.org. Adapted original web stories for broadcast semiweekly. Produced compelling multimedia stories to accompany radio features. Authored WBUR's Web style guide.

"Best Multi-Media Presentation" for "Finding A Way Along Route 9," PRNDI, June 2011

Reporter/Anchor

KPBS, San Diego (July 2006–August 2008)

Radio journalist, local anchor of "Weekend Edition." Fill-in host, producer of "Morning Edition." Produced extensive national reporting on the 2007 wildfires for NPR. Prolific spot reporter. Launched a multimedia reporting fellowship with Michael Marcotte and developed standards, best practices for newsroom convergence.

Reporter

North County Times, Escondido, Calif. (January 2005–July 2006)

Business reporter. Author of a weekly series spotlighting innovative executives in the San Diego area.

B.A., Political Science

University of California, San Diego

A.A., Journalism

Palomar College, San Marcos, Calif.